speaker, enacted no railroad legislation, and abolished the old commission, two of which were representatives of the farming interest and one a practical railroad man. Since then the railroad commission has not been heard from. It was made up entirely of new men, two from Portland and one from South-eastern Oregon, several hundred miles from a railroad, and who has to go to California to take the train for Oregon. They were unwilling to retain the old clerk of the commission, to say nothing about its good name and reputation. The new members of the commission are very fine men personally and there is not a word to be uttered against them or their administration. It was evidently the intention of the legislature to sit down hard on Mr. Geer for making the railroad law of Oregon of some value to some one besides the corporations, and also to wipe out the old commission for enforcing that law in the interest of the producers. Unless the new commission gets fairly into the harness and catches up with the people's idea of what a commission should be, the next legislature will abolish the commission, and it will be difficult to give a good reason why it should not be done. Already many men who were strong commission men are saying they are done with commissions for railroad regulation. The old commission made a good fight. They reduced rates on all the roads in the state. They fought their way through the courts and won every time. They got a decision eliminating watered stock as an element in estimating freight charges. The railroad commission of Oregon and the law had as fine a standing as in any state in the union. It was winning the approval of conservative men like Vetch, Weatherford, and Attorney-General Chamberlain. But all this had to be undone because the railroad people did not like Mr. Geer for speaker. In the senate when Mr. Fulton beat Mr. Hinch for president of the senate the successful man offered the other his choice of committees and a good feeling prevailed that made the senate a far more harmonious and efficient body than the house. Why? Because in the house the speaker would not recognize the existence of Mr. Geer in any manner. Mr. Keady went too far. He should have been as generous as Mr. Fulton was. It pays, and it is more manly. "No one can afford to be more generous than the successful man, and if left to himself Mr. Keady would probably have done as Mr. Fulton did. But Mr. Keady was very poorly, and seemed not to be at all, his own master in politics."

One member from Portland was a main spoke in the wheel of the last legislature and is responsible for a good many things that will be charged up to the Republican party next year, and he can probably do very little to repair the damage. It is not certain that he is now in the state. The house he was connected with failed at Portland recently. He emigrated from Europe some ten years ago, and came from San Francisco to Portland after learning to speak English and gaining a smattering of slum city politics. With but a comparatively short residence in Oregon and a little prominence in lodge matters he turns up as the leading actor in the combination that dominated the last legislature, and probably did more than all others combined to secure the $120,000 for the state militia. This recently amalgamated and now bankrupt foreigner had more influence in carrying important measures over the governor's veto than the oldest Oregonian in either house. He was himself the seat of government. Whatever had the consent of this Multnomah king went whether it had merit or not. This recent importation was a terror to mossbacks and probably added more to the taxes of the people and the bad smelling record of the house than any man in it. It is not an enviable record. But this frightful example should serve the people of Oregon as an index of the way they are travelling. This state seems to be suffering from two conditions. A great many people seem still to be living in the primitive conditions which prevailed here twenty years ago, when there was but little legislation, small appropriations and all were reasonably honest. Then every man who went to the legislature was his own clerk and when he attended a night session carried a coal oil lamp under his arm from his lodging house to the assembly chamber. The science of looting the treasury under the guise of government had not been reduced to a fine art. If a clerk was employed he was a competent person and he was paid for actual service. Face powders, frizzes, and languishing eyes had not become an indispensable part of the machinery of the state. But those days of simple form of government have passed away. The day of the hoodler has come over our country. He is present in every avenue of public life. The generations who live in the past and have not recognized the change from old to new Oregon are the victims of the political confidence man who has been developed by the faster life of a faster age. In the past ten years he has come in from all over the Union. Every state has contributed its quota of played out and tricky politicians. Men who have failed in all other occupations have come here to prey off primitive conditions and play upon the people through the medium of an antiquity called a constitution. With a short session of the legislature, with a system of state officers and fees adapted to a primitive state and a small population, with one-third of the legislature and one-third of the votes of the state cast in a large city, with a thinly settled rural population—Oregon has a very exciting political future to contemplate. These are conditions that should engage the thought of our best citizens seriously. There must be a proper adjustment of the balances and checks in our state government or the people will be reduced to a worse state of political servitude and dependency than was ever an American colony before the revolution. Unless intelligent men take hold of the evils so plainly in sight the unscrupulous demagog will prey upon the alarms of the people and yet be unable to give them any relief. The hoodler welcomes the hoodlum politician into the arena. He is not afraid of the ignorant demagogue. He fears intelligence and incorruptible manhood no matter the party to which it belongs.

Dame Nature a Good Book-keeper.
She don't let us stay long in her debt before we settle for what we owe her. She gives us a few years grace at the most but the reckoning surely comes. Have you neglected a cough or allowed your blood to grow impure without feeling the warnings? Be wise in time, and get the world-famous Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which cures as well as promises. As a blood renovator, a lung healer, and a cure for scrofulous taints, it towers above all others, as Olympus towers above all hills. To warrant a commodity to be so honorable and above deception, and a guarantee is a symbol of honest dealing. You get it with every bottle of the "Discovery." By druggists.

PROVED A PROPHECY.

The editor of the JOURNAL printed these words a few days before the last November election: "The fight for the presidency clearly revolves about the tariff and finance—the latter being by far the more important. * * * The tariff policy of our country is a settled question, as compared with finance. Our financial policy is not established. It is a patchwork relic of the rebellion. It is unsuited to times of peace and expanding commerce. How shall it be amended?"

The New York World, an organ of the administration if there is one, says Saturday that it "is enabled to announce authoritatively that the immediate policy of President Cleveland and his administration in regard to the approaching special congress will be briefly as follows: "First—Silver reform, by the absolute and unqualified repeal of the Sherman law. "Second—Tariff reform, to be prosecuted in accordance with the pledges of the party, as soon as, but not before, the finances of the country are again upon a stable basis."

War and the World's Fair.

As the first great world's fair held in London in 1851 was shortly afterward followed by the Crimean war, so some of its successors have had more or less great wars closely on their heels. If the world's fairs did not bring on those wars, they certainly did not prevent them. But our Columbian celebration presented one spectacle which is probably without precedent and should be of good augury.

Many of those who witnessed the great parade of sailors and marines on the streets of New York on April 27 may not have been mindful of the fact that they saw something that perhaps has never happened within the memory of the present generation and would not be possible anywhere else in the world—soldiers and sailors of 10 different nations with arms in their hands united in one festive array—Englishmen, Russians, Germans and Frenchmen belonging to the armed forces of rival powers that may, as is thought, at any moment come to blows among themselves—peaceably marching with muskets on their shoulders and swords at their sides behind one another in one column.

It was a spectacle emblematic of the position of this great American republic among the nations of the earth—the great peace power of the world embracing in its hospitality the great war powers of the world for a celebration of human progress and mutual good will—Harper's Weekly.

Zola's New Religion.

The Paris students ought to consider themselves singularly honored in having received direct from M. Zola his revelation of the new religion—the "religion of work." Nothing brings happiness, not even science and the progressive familiarity with the truths of nature. The philosophy of life consists in work, continual work, which makes men good because it does not give them time to do mischief or to allow their minds to dwell upon the illusions and chimeras of the idealists. M. Zola points to himself as an example of a man who has followed this religion of work steadfastly and who has found his consolation in it.—St. James Gazette.

ANOTHER BIBLE COMPLETED.

Rev. Bingham's Translation in the Language of the Gilbert Islanders.

The first Bible in the language of the Gilbert Islanders was printed recently in the pressrooms of the American Bible society in the Bible House in New York city. The publication marks the end of 34 years of labor on the part of the Rev. Hiram Bingham, who has been a missionary on the islands.

Several friends of the missionary gathered in the composing room and listened to Mr. Bingham as he told of the work of his lifetime. His father, Hiram Bingham, was a missionary before him. Mr. Bingham himself having been born in Honolulu 62 years ago. He was graduated from Yale college in 1853, and in 1856 began his labors on the Gilbert island group, which is 2,500 miles to the southwest of the Sandwich Islands, being on the line of the equator. Three years afterward he undertook to reduce to writing the hitherto unwritten language of the natives and began the work of translating the New Testament. Ill health forced him to suspend his labor, and it was not until April 11, 1873, that he finished the New Testament.

On April 11, 1890, three years ago, he found himself at the last verse of the Old Testament. He then came to America and on May 12, 1892, put the manuscript into the hands of Dr. Gilman, the secretary of the Bible society, to be printed. On June 11 he received the first proof, and in this city, with his wife, he began the proofreading 10 months ago. To read the proof of the last verse of the last chapter of Revelation and thus to end his task was the purpose of the ceremony.

Mr. Bingham stood in the center of his circle of friends among the fonts of type in the most notable composing room in the world, where the Scriptures are set in 242 different languages. The concluding verse was put in type, a proof was taken, a slight correction made, and Mr. Bingham read the verse aloud in the Gilbert island tongue. Superintendent Thompson then led the way to the pressroom, and another foreign Bible was added to the list printed by the American Bible society. In the afternoon several volumes were bound and presented as souvenirs of the occasion. The book contains 937 pages.

Two Negatives of One Woman.

A photographer says: "One lady ordered a large picture of herself 12 years ago. She was then a blooming maiden with a round cherub face and very good looking. For some reason she never called for her picture, and I hung it up in my collection. Last week this same lady came in to sit for her picture. She didn't know me, although I recognized her directly, for a photographer rarely forgets faces. She had grown quite old looking, and after her toddled a couple of young ones. I showed her a negative, but she scorned the insinuation of the faithful camera that she looked so old and careworn."

"I remembered her picture on the wall and persuaded her to let me finish one of the impressions. Reluctantly she consented and went away with a palpable frown of disgust on her countenance. When she called again, I showed her the picture of 12 years ago. She was delighted, and it did me good to see the smile of satisfaction on her face. I made her a dozen copies, and now she thinks me the finest photographer in the world. Not many women like to admit the inroads of age and care."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Month For Muffins.

"March is the muffin month," said Andrew Short of Michigan. "Perhaps you don't know that the muffin is an oriental device for the entertainment of the appetite. Well, it is. The muffin's origin is Moorish. At Rabat in Morocco to this very day you may hear the muffin bell sound at 4 o'clock, when the muffin man comes round. The muffin is as popular there as it is in London, and the griddle on which the Moors bake it is exactly the same as that used by us, and it is fixed in a like manner over the fire. The Moor's name for the muffin is 'maphula.' Originally it was 'maphul,' but the Greeks added the 'a.' Take away the final vowel and change 'l' for its cognate 'n,' 'maphula' becomes 'mufen,' and there you are!"—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Good and Bad Elements in Tea.

There are two elements in the dried tea leaf which distinguish it from other dried herbs, one of which is the source whence comes all the inspiration which attaches to the beverage, the other the source of nearly all the criticism which it receives. The first is theine, the active principle of the herb, the physiological effect of which is yet but very imperfectly understood; the second is the harmful tannin, which, it is universally admitted, cannot be taken into the human stomach in any appreciable quantity without ill results.—Good Housekeeping.
